UL is excited to announce the new limited production program for lighting.

Understanding the unique challenges for small and low-volume manufacturers, UL has created the limited production program for lighting to better align with small-scale production models and minimize costs associated with certification.

Through our new program, manufacturers producing small-scale manufacturing runs can now earn the familiar and well-respected UL certification Mark. Limited production manufacturers also benefit from reduced costs; since the application of a UL Mark is witnessed by UL Follow-up Services, service visits and fees are eliminated.

The process is as simple as 1, 2, 3:

1. Complete all administrative documentation, and agree upon a scope of work
2. Evaluate the product's compliance to the applicable requirements
3. Apply the labels to the products which are included as part of the limited production run

By leveraging the collective experience of UL's more than 12,000 employees during product development, you can streamline your overall compliance process. Throughout UL's more than 143 global laboratory and testing facilities, UL's engineers help you seamlessly meet compliance requirements in all the markets you want to reach. With UL as your certifier, you have access to our full portfolio of services including:

- North American safety certification
- Global Market safety certification
- Photometric testing
- Performance testing
