

Why do companies need to report ESGs?

Investors and hedge funds are continually looking at environmental, social and governance (ESG) reporting and sustainability metrics to determine what businesses they will choose to invest in. It has become the business standard across industries.

Investors like

BLACKROCK

consider companies without a plan to address climate change to be a

BAD RISK

Hedge fund managers agree that

INSTITUTIONAL INVESTORS ARE THE BIGGEST DEMAND DRIVER FOR ESG-RELATED HEDGE FUNDS.

They also think progress is hampered by a lack of robust templates, consistent definitions and reliable data.¹

Why Turbo Buildings™?

Investors are looking for companies with strong ESG reporting, but getting started is a challenge.

We believe it can be simplified. UL's Turbo Buildings™ software can help you through reporting in three easy steps:

Nearly all CEOs
(97%)
surveyed believe that sustainability is important to the future success of their business.²

ONLY 15% of companies have a mature ESG-focused strategy,

75% are in progress or raising awareness and

10% of companies have not yet started thinking about an ESG strategy.³

Collect ESG data, like energy and water usage, from individual properties. Data can be collected through utility integrations, uploading spreadsheets or manual entry.

Review data submitted with precise audit trails and easily identify if there's an unexplained jump in utility consumption.

Submit your ESG report directly to GRESB with our automatic API integration, saving you time during the busy reporting season.

Additional ESG reporting integrations may be available. Contact us at UL360@UL.com or visit UL.com/turbobuildings more information.

¹ KPMG 2020, <https://home.kpmg/xx/en/home/insights/2020/02/sustainable-investing.html>

² Accenture, "The 2016 United Nations Global Compact-Accenture Strategy CEO Study," 2016.

³ KPMG, 2020 <https://assets.kpmg/content/dam/kpmg/xx/pdf/2020/02/sustainable-investing.pdf>

UL and the UL logo are trademarks of UL LLC © 2020.